Dick, this letter came today, in a plain envelope, that is, without anything printed on it, return address or anything else. Much about it made me curious. We had barely moved in when the routes were renumbered. Route 7 is on the stationery we had printed as soon as we moved it, which was 10/1/67, but the letterheads had not been printed, so we had the new number on them. The 7 appeared on envelopes only. Not in any book we printed nor in any directory of books. Perhaps you may be able to consult a phone book or a city directory, if the names mean nothing to you. If you have any impressions, I'd like to know what they are.Sorry the copy is not clearer. "achine out of whack. I do finding it interesting that someone goes to the trouble to print a letterhead without matching envelopes and without return address, phone or any of the other messages most people in any kind of business usually want to impart. Best, HW 1/2/73